No No to Jo Jo

The latest trend sweeping across primary schools is the JoJo Bow.

But what are they? Well, it turns out it's down to JoJo Siwa, a 13-year-old YouTube star dancer in the US reality show Dance Moms. JoJo Bows are brightly-coloured big bows usually worn to decorate a high ponytail. JoJo Siwa started the craze after wearing these big bows on TV and on her online channel which has a huge audience - she has 4.5 million followers on Instagram and nearly three million on YouTube. Big bows have actually been worn for years by competitive dancers, gymnasts and cheerleaders but internet sensation has put them back in vogue. They may remind some parents of "the Fergie bows of the 1980s" - referring to the big bows that were the fashion staple of the Duchess of York, Sarah Ferguson.

Children are allowed to wear 'small' bows in their hair for school, however these should be in school colours (blue or white).
